counsel for 0777746 B.C. Ltd. carrying on business as Mama Z's Jade Boulder Cafe

OVERVIEW

1. On January 16, 2014, pursuant to section 116 of the Employment Standards Act (the “Act”), 0777746 B.C. Ltd., carrying on business as Mama Z's Jade Boulder Cafe (the “Employer”) filed an application for reconsideration of a decision of a Member of the Tribunal dated January 23, 2013, and numbered D007/13 (the “Original Decision”), regarding the complaint of Dennis Deans (“Deans”).
2. The Original Decision resulted from an appeal by the Employer of a determination (the “Determination”) issued by a delegate of the Director of Employment Standards (the “Delegate”) and dated October 1, 2012, following an investigation conducted pursuant to section 76 of the Act.
3. The Delegate found that the Employer had contravened sections 17 and 18 of the Act in failing to pay all wages owing to five of its former employees, including Deans. The Delegate found that a total of $29,271.44 in wages and interest was payable to the employees, of which $4,385.57 was found to be owed to Deans. The Delegate also imposed two $500.00 administrative penalties for the contraventions. The total found to be payable was $30,271.44.
4. The Original Decision dismissed the Employer's appeal of the Determination.
5. I have before me the Determination, the Reasons for the Determination, the record supplied to the Tribunal by the Director pursuant to subsection 112(5) of the Act, documents and submissions delivered in the appeal proceedings, the Original Decision, as well as documents and submissions received on this application for reconsideration.
6. Pursuant to section 36 of the Administrative Tribunals Act, which is incorporated into these proceedings by section 103 of the Act, and Rule 8 of the Tribunal's Rules of Practice and Procedure, the Tribunal may hold any combination of written, electronic and oral hearings on applications for reconsideration. Having reviewed the materials before me, I find I can decide this application based on the written materials filed, without an oral or electronic hearing.

FACTS

7. At all material times, the Employer operated as a restaurant in Dease Lake.
8. Deans advised the Delegate that he was employed as a chef at the restaurant from July 1, 2009, until October 15, 2010, and that he had not been paid for four pay periods between May 14 and July 15, 2010.
9. The Employer provided pay statements and some cheques for the period in question. None of the cheques provided were cashed. The Employer said that it had paid Deans in cash.

10. In the Reasons for the Determination, the Delegate noted that there were inconsistencies and deficiencies in the Employer's records. The dates of the cheques did not match the pay periods in respect of which they were supposed to have been issued, and the amounts of the cheques differed from the net amounts payable shown on the pay statements. Cheques also appeared to have been written out of order, with cheque 0909 showing a date of May 31, 2010, while cheque 0907 was dated June 14, 2010.
11. The Delegate concluded that the Employer's pay statements were the most accurate record of the wages that Deans had earned. He decided, however, that the records could not be relied upon for the purpose of showing that Deans had actually received the wages recorded in them, due to the inconsistencies and deficiencies noted above.
12. On appeal, the Employer argued that the Delegate had failed to observe the principles of natural justice when he chose to resolve Deans' complaint by way of an investigation. More specifically, it submitted that it was an error for the Delegate to reject the Employer's evidence and accept Deans' conflicting version of events without the benefit of an oral hearing. The Employer argued that the conflicts in the evidence required an oral hearing, at which the credibility of Deans could be tested. Absent that, the Employer stated that the Delegate should at least have made further inquiries, perhaps in the form of a demand that Deans produce his bank records, before deciding that Deans had not been paid his wages in cash, as the Employer contended.
13. Finally, the Employer asserted that the Delegate erred when he failed to give adequate reasons for his rejecting the Employer's evidence, and his accepting Deans' evidence.
14. The Tribunal Member dismissed the Employer's appeal. She did so pursuant to subsection 114(1)(f) of the Act, which permits the Tribunal to dismiss an appeal on the ground that there is no reasonable prospect that the appeal will succeed. The Member stated:
 34. I am not persuaded that the Director's decision to investigate the complaints rather than hold an oral hearing constitutes a failure to comply with natural justice. While there is no doubt that the evidence from both parties was wanting in terms of credibility, I am unable to conclude that the Director was under any duty to conduct an oral hearing in order to resolve any evidentiary conflicts or that her decision not to do so constitutes a denial of natural justice.
 35. I am also not persuaded that the Director failed to scrutinize the evidence or failed to give reasons for rejecting the Employer's evidence. Sections 27 and 28 of the Act require an Employer to maintain employment records, including hours of work and wage statements. Following a Demand by the Director, the Employer submitted both pay statements for Mr. Deans as well as a number of paycheques that she acknowledged had never been cashed. She contended that Mr. Deans had been paid in cash, a contention the delegate rejected. The delegate articulated his reasons for not accepting the Employer's assertion, which were that the cheque amounts did not correspond with the net amounts on the pay statements and the cheques appeared to have been written out of order. Further, the Employer provided no evidence of the cash payments, either by bank statements or receipts.
 36. Finally, I do not accept Counsel's submission that the Director rejected all of the Employer's evidence. The Determination itself indicates that the Director relied on the Employer's pay statements as "the most accurate record or (sic) gross wages earned". The Determination shows that the delegate found that the Employer's records were the best evidence of Mr. Deans' hours of work but rejected the Employer's assertions that Mr. Deans was paid for that work. The burden of demonstrating that an Employee has been paid for work performed rests with the Employer. I find no basis to interfere with the Director's conclusion that the Employer failed to discharge this burden.

ISSUES

15. There are two issues which arise on an application for reconsideration of a decision of the Tribunal:
 1. Does the request meet the threshold established by the Tribunal for reconsidering a decision?
 2. If so, should the decision be confirmed, cancelled, varied or referred back to the original panel, or another panel of the Tribunal?

ANALYSIS

16. The power of the Tribunal to reconsider one of its decisions arises pursuant to section 116, the relevant portion of which reads as follows:
 - 116 (1) On application under subsection (2) or on its own motion, the tribunal may
 - (a) reconsider any order or decision of the tribunal, and
 - (b) confirm, vary or cancel the order or decision or refer the matter back to the original panel or another panel.
17. The Tribunal's reconsideration power is discretionary, and must be exercised with restraint. Reconsideration is not an automatically to a party who disagrees with an order or decision of the Tribunal in an appeal.
18. The Tribunal's approach towards applications under section 116 is derived in part from section 2 of the Act, which identifies as purposes of the legislation the promotion of fair treatment of employees and employers, and the provision of fair and efficient procedures for resolving disputes over the application and interpretation of the Act. It is also derived from a desire to preserve the integrity of the appeal process described in section 112 of the Act.
19. The Tribunal has adopted a two-stage analysis when considering applications for reconsideration. In the first stage, the Tribunal considers the applicant's submissions, the record that was before the Member in the appeal proceedings, and the decision the applicant seeks to have reconsidered. The Tribunal then asks whether the matters raised in the application warrant a reconsideration of the decision at all. In order for the answer to be "yes" the applicant must raise questions of fact, law, principle or procedure flowing from the decision which are sufficiently important as to warrant reconsideration.
20. If the applicant satisfies the requirements in the first stage, the Tribunal will go on to the second stage of the inquiry, which focuses on the merits of the Tribunal's decision in the appeal. When considering that decision at this second stage, the standard applied is one of correctness.
21. In this case, there is an issue of the timeliness of the Employer's application for reconsideration which I must address as a preliminary matter. The Original Decision was issued on January 23, 2013. The Employer's application for reconsideration was filed on January 16, 2014, nearly one year later.
22. Section 27(2) of the Tribunal's Rules of Practice and Procedure (the "Rules") – formerly section 25(2) – states that the Employer should deliver its application for reconsideration within 30 days after the Original Decision. Section 27(3) of the Rules – formerly section 25(3) – states that if an applicant delivers the application for reconsideration more than 30 days after the Tribunal's decision, the applicant must provide written reasons for the delay.

23. The Employer submits that the reason for the delay in the filing of its application for reconsideration is that it initially chose to challenge the Original Decision by means of an application for judicial review. The Employer filed its application for judicial review in March 2013, and served notice of the application on the Director and the Tribunal early in June 2013. The Employer also submits that some respondents were also served.
24. The Employer states that by correspondence dated June 10 and June 11, 2013, counsel for both the Tribunal and the Director took the position that an application for reconsideration under the Act should have been filed prior to the commencement of the judicial review proceedings. Counsel for the Employer advises that he disagreed with that position, and after further discussions later in June it was agreed that the judicial review proceedings would be held in abeyance until the Employer either served the individual respondent employees named in these proceedings, or commenced an application for reconsideration under section 116 of the Act.
25. The Employer states it encountered significant difficulties in locating, and then serving, all of the individual respondents with its judicial review application. The Employer says in October 2013, counsel for the Director wrote to the Employer allowing it until January 15, 2014, to either serve the individual respondents or to file an application for reconsideration. The Employer was unsuccessful in serving all of the individual respondents and so, on January 16, 2014, it filed its application for reconsideration with the Tribunal.
26. In Re Perera, BC EST # RD071/13, the Tribunal reviewed the principles to be applied when considering whether an application for reconsideration should be dismissed as untimely. During the course of its examination, the Tribunal reaffirmed that the time limit for bringing an application for reconsideration may be extended, in appropriate cases, because the Tribunal has the power to determine its own procedures within the jurisdiction conferred to it under the Act. In exercising its discretion to consider late applications, the Tribunal will consider the length of the delay, the reasons for the delay, and the conduct of the applicant, and the merits of an application.
27. In Alpha Neon Ltd., BC EST # RD032/12, the Tribunal was presented with a factual situation similar to the one that is before me now. There, the application for reconsideration was also untimely because the applicant decided, instead, to file an application for judicial review. The applicant justified this on the basis that the arguments it proposed to make on judicial review were the same as the ones it had presented to the Tribunal on appeal, and so any decision on reconsideration would be redundant. The Tribunal Member deciding the application for reconsideration concluded this did not constitute a satisfactory explanation for the delay.
28. In my view, the delay here is unreasonable and I am not persuaded the Tribunal should exercise its discretion to consider the late application. The Tribunal's Rules provide for a filing period of 30 days. The application for reconsideration was filed nearly a year after the Original Decision was issued. While the Employer attempted to challenge the Original Decision by judicial review not long after it was issued, counsel for the Director and counsel for the Tribunal advised the Employer in June 2013 that it should apply for reconsideration prior to proceeding with its application for judicial review. It seems that the parties disagreed about that. It also appears that counsel for the Employer agreed that the Employer should either proceed with its application for judicial review, or an application for reconsideration. While counsel for the Employer states that it was contemplated at that time that a late application for reconsideration might be made, there is no evidence that counsel for the Director, or the Tribunal, ever conceded that any application for reconsideration the Employer might file should be permitted to proceed, notwithstanding the delay.
29. The Employer has provided no substantive reason why an application for reconsideration was not filed in a timely way. It notes it has had difficulty serving the individual respondents on its judicial review application.

However, an application for reconsideration does not require the applicant to serve the individual respondents. The Employer does not explain why it could not file its application for reconsideration until January 2014. In my view, the fact that a party has decided to file an application for judicial review and was unable to serve the respondents with that application is not an adequate reason to explain a failure to file an application for reconsideration. Counsel for the Employer posits, in his submission, that it is far from certain that there is a strict requirement that reconsideration occur prior to an aggrieved party's making application for judicial review of a decision of the Tribunal. However, the courts have confirmed that parties should exhaust the remedies made available to them within the statutory scheme before embarking on a quest for judicial review (see BC Ferries 2013 BCCA 497 p. 39-41; Carriere 1995 BCJ No 2927).

30. Moreover, a review of the merits of this application has failed to persuade me that the Employer has presented a clear and compelling case for reconsideration.

31. The Employer's submission on reconsideration identifies several grounds on which it says the Original Decision should be cancelled. More particularly, the Employer submits that the Tribunal Member failed to:

- apply the law relating to when an oral hearing ought to be held;
- comply with the principles of natural justice by making decisions on the basis of documents only, without obtaining the best evidence and confirming the reliability of that evidence through an oral hearing; and
- consider [the Tribunal's] own past record leading to a conclusion inconsistent with its previous jurisprudence.

32. On the application for reconsideration, the Employer raises its evidentiary concern in these terms:

...the employer submits that when there are issues of credibility and in cases where the documents give an incomplete picture...the Delegate (and subsequently the Tribunal on appeal) must at the very least engage in a judicial analysis as to whether an oral hearing must be held.

...with respect, the Delegate in the investigative process and the Tribunal on appeal did not engage in the requisite judicial analysis of whether the evidentiary problems required an oral hearing. Further the Employer submits that had the requisite judicial analysis been undertaken then an oral hearing would have been the only way to resolve the evidentiary difficulties in these cases.

33. Subsection 76(1) of the Act obliges the Director to "accept and review" complaints. However, subsections (2) and (3) of section 76 make it clear that the Director has a broad discretion when deciding the method(s) that may be employed in order to dispose of complaints. The Director may, for example, choose to "review, mediate, investigate or adjudicate" a complaint.

34. Moreover, the Director's powers should not be viewed exclusively, in the sense that only one avenue for the handling of a complaint must be chosen at the outset, with all others permanently removed from the Director's arsenal thereafter. In my view, it would subvert the attainment of the policy objectives set out in section 2 of the Act if the Director's powers were to be circumscribed in this fashion.

35. The handling of a complaint is a multi-faceted process. The approach the Director may take in bringing the process to a conclusion may change as circumstances warrant, and as information is gathered. What the legislature appears to have intended is that the process be flexible, in keeping with the desire that complaints be dealt with expeditiously, and at modest cost, if possible.

36. It follows, and the Employer concedes, that the parties implicated in complaint proceedings have no absolute right to an oral hearing. As stated in Baker v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) [1999] SCJ No.39:
- ...it cannot be said that an oral hearing is always necessary to ensure a fair hearing and consideration of the issues involved. The flexible nature of the duty of fairness recognizes that meaningful participation can occur in different ways in different situations.
37. As the Employer points out, there have been cases where the Tribunal has decided that a delegate's refusing to conduct an oral hearing to resolve a complaint amounted to a failure to observe the principles of natural justice (see, for example, Enviro Surface Care Ltd., BC EST # D037/10, and C&W Salvage Ltd., BC EST # D103/12). That said, I am of the opinion that the Tribunal would find it difficult to make such a determination absent its finding that the complaint could only be resolved fairly if an oral hearing were to be conducted and, conversely, that it would be an abuse of the Director's discretion if any other mode of proceeding were selected.
38. In both the Enviro and C&W cases, the resolution of issues of credibility was fundamental to the ultimate disposition of the complaints. In both cases, legal counsel had requested oral hearings before determinations were issued by the delegate.
39. In Enviro, the Tribunal said this:
33. ...While I do not wish to be taken as suggesting that an oral complaint hearing must inevitably be held where credibility issues arise, in this case, these issues were at the centre of the dispute between the parties and colour every issue that was before the delegate for determination.
40. The following comments are taken from C&W:
16. ...It is clear that on almost every important issue there was an aspect concerning the credibility of some evidence relied upon by the delegate.
- ...
19. In this case there was direct conflict of evidence of the parties on numerous key issues. The decisions on credibility by the delegate are central to the key issues. CW counsel's submissions regarding credibility suggested that the delegate hold an oral hearing; but it appears that the delegate, after consultation with his manager, decided to continue with the investigative approach. The Director did not make specific submissions on this appeal regarding why declining an oral hearing was appropriate in these circumstances; or why the investigative process was preferred.
41. Deans' complaint presents a scenario that is distinguishable from Enviro and C&W. No one on behalf of the Employer requested that the Delegate adjudicate the complaint by means of an oral hearing. The evidence before the Delegate was in conflict on the question whether Deans had been paid for the periods in question. As Enviro affirms, however, the presence of a credibility issue does not automatically require that the Director convene an oral hearing in order to resolve it. I infer from the Delegate's Reasons that he believed the conflict could be resolved, in the circumstances of the case, without an oral hearing. I cannot conclude that he was in error in drawing that conclusion.
42. The Delegate's Reasons demonstrate that he considered and weighed the evidence presented to him. He did not, as the Employer incorrectly asserts, reject the Employer's evidence entirely. Instead, he accepted as accurate the Employer's pay statements for Deans.

43. The Delegate also gave reasons for determining that the Employer's evidence regarding the payments made to Deans was unreliable. He said that the dates on the cheques did not match the pay periods, the amounts of the cheques differed from the amounts on the pay statements, and cheques appeared to have been written out of order.
44. I agree completely with the comments in the Original Decision to the effect that the onus of proving that wages have been paid rests on the Employer. Here, the Delegate determined that the evidence tendered by the Employer was inadequate to discharge that burden. That finding was based on a considered review of the evidence the Employer had presented. It was not perverse or inexplicable.
45. I find the Delegate was not obliged to require that Deans produce his bank statements to corroborate his assertion that he had not been paid his wages in cash. I see nothing in the record to indicate that the Employer ever suggested such an approach to the Delegate. Nor do I see any evidence indicating that if bank records had been produced, it was probable that they would have revealed whether the wages in question had been paid.
46. For all of these reasons, I have decided that the Employer has failed to demonstrate that the conclusions reached in the Original Decision warrant reconsideration.

ORDER

47. Pursuant to section 116 of the Act, I order that the Original Decision be confirmed.
